++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy rain or snow and strong winds sweeping northwards today.

Today:
Dry, bright, frosty start. Heavy rain, with heavy snow on high ground, perhaps briefly to lower levels, will spread northeastwards through the day. Turning showery from the south later. Becoming windy with easterly gales developing.

Tonight:
Staying wet and windy across northern Scotland with snow becoming confined to the hills. Clear periods and scattered showers over central and southern Scotland with strong easterly winds gradually easing.

Wednesday:
Bright spells and showers, these most frequent and heavy at times over eastern Scotland. Fewer showers and more sunshine in west. Persistent rain and gales confined to Northern Isles.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Drier and brighter on Thursday with lighter winds. Band of rain will cross Scotland Thursday night with sunshine and scattered showers on Friday. Rain and stronger winds following on Saturday.
